Musical Phrasing and Dance

By Richard Fiore

(Licentiate, (LAB, LAR, T) Imperial Society of Teachers of Dancing)

Ballroom dancing involves a connection between music and physical movement. Listening carefully to music and being able to interpret its melodic structure always results in a more rewarding experience on the dance floor. Most dancers have become focused on the basic rhythm of 4/4 and 3/4 timing schemes. This article will discuss the concept of phrasing, which goes far beyond the basic rhythmic dance count.

Phrasing is a fascinating aspect of music that adds a tremendous creative dimension to dancing. A phrase in music is a melodic and rhythmic structure in which notes are arranged to form a musical sentence. Two or more phrases may be combined to form a type of musical paragraph. Phrases typically repeat themselves within a composition and combine to form the melodic narrative structure of a piece of music. A song writer ties phrase patterns together to form a cohesive composition that will elicit an emotional response. The phrasing in music enhances the composition and makes everything sound like it fits together. Phrasing is one of the key elements of musicality. Other elements include melody, rhythm, timing, tempo and interpretation.

In dance, a standard 4/4 rhythmic phrase is normally counted as 1,2,3,4 - 5,6,7,8. This represents the basic rhythmic timing of two bars of music. The accented or heavy beats are typically on the 1ST and 3RD beat in each bar. It is important to note that the eight counts commonly used in dance only refer to a specific amount of time taken up by four 1/4 beat time slots in each bar. In actual fact, while this describes the duration of each bar it does not define how the music is actually arranged within the bar. For example, as we count 1,2,3,4 in a given bar, the time it takes for a single beat can be composed of a quarter note or two eighth notes or four sixteenth notes that are tied together. This illustrates that there is more going on within the structure of each bar than the basic timing count. Applied to dancing, two bars are taken as the minimum number of bars required to complete a basic figure. In a sense this can also be looked at as a basic phrase segment. A set of eight beats can be compared to a simple musical sentence or phrase. It has a beginning and an end but does not tell the whole story; however, when multiple phrases are combined together, they create a complete storyline. One of the most common phrase arrangements is 4 sets of 8 beats yielding a 32-beat phrase pattern. There are other common phrasing patterns as well, e.g., 6 sets of 8 beats yielding a 48-beat phrase pattern that is common in blues music. In a well-choreographed routine, step patterns are selected that best express the phrasing of a particular piece of music.

Each musical composition has its own melodic and rhythmic character. When selecting a piece of music for a dance routine, you will need to make sure that it matches the dance not only in the overall bar-to-bar timing but also in the essential character of the dance. For example, the lilting quality of foxtrot, the rise and fall of waltz and the staccato nature of tango each represent a unique dance characteristic. This is where phrasing plays an important role. A musical composition uses melodic structures to tell a story. An experienced dancer is able to interpret the music and recreate the story through dance movements. Dancing in this manner becomes an empathetic expression of the music. The step patterns are arranged in a way that acknowledges the phrasing which in turn will create a deeper emotional connection with the music.

The arrangement of music contains many complex elements. Coordinating dance movements to music requires that one carefully discern the character of the rhythm. Some music is written specifically for dancing as its structure is more even and consistent. As such, step patterns are more easily adapted to this music. The ability to distinguish rhythmic and melodic patterns is one of the most important aspects of dancing. If dance steps do not seem to flow properly with the music, it is likely that the phrasing of the music may not lend itself to the particular dance style. Conversely, when a dance step pattern flows with a particular composition, its phrasing is more than likely to be the main supporting factor.

Old School Teachers

By Michael Ditkoff

Michael Ditkoff has taken ten years of private ballroom, latin, swing and hustle lessons; eight years of private Argentine Tango, Waltz and Milonga lessons; three years of Embodied Yoga to improve his frame, and six months of Alexander Technique to improve his posture. He was also a dance host on three cruise ships.

Email Michael at: tangomaniac@optimum.net

I spoke to Frank Wolfe, a noted Long Island old school teacher at a Waterfalls dance. He lamented that a lot of students look for the easiest way to learn how to dance which isn't necessarily the best way to learn how to dance. My Argentine Tango teacher Joe, said, "Michael, if there were any short cuts to learning how to dance, I would have found them by now."

I wrote about the value of private lessons in the September-October 2022 issues. But which teacher to choose? Every teacher emphasizes different dance aspects. I separate teachers into two distinct categories. One is old school, and the other group isn't old school. The name of the second group isn't important; just that they aren't old school.

Age doesn't determine if the teacher is old school. WHAT is taught determines if the teacher is old school. (January 2023 issue.)

Old School teachers emphasize technique. (See April 2018 issue.) There seems to be very few of them based on what I see at dances. Dancers squeeze their partners' hands with a vise-like grip. Leaders don't use their frame to lead, but their arms, like they are moving a video game joystick. Followers can't stay on their balance when they are jolted. Followers take tiny forward steps in Cha Cha and Rumba because they are afraid of stepping onto the leader's foot. At a dance in the city, a woman continually looked down at my feet trying to figure out the lead. I said, "The lead comes from the chest, not the foot so you're looking in the wrong place. You're supposed to feel the lead." She really needed a neck brace to keep her head up.

Why do so many dancers have terrible dance habits? That's the wrong question. The correct question is "What are they being taught?" I know it's difficult teaching beginners who have anxiety over learning something new. (I was once a beginner.)

Joe didn't start with figures, but with leading in Apilado style. (June 2018 issue.) We then moved on to pivots. After about nine months of lessons I asked, "When do we get to the good stuff? He said, "You're not ready for the good stuff." Spoken like a true old school teacher.

Even if you don't appreciate the value of being taught by an old school teacher, I guarantee your partners will appreciate it.
