Stay Relaxed

By Richard Fiore

(Licentiate, (LAB, LAR, T) Imperial Society of Teachers of Dancing)

Email Richard at: rf1111@yahoo.com

Ballroom dancing is a very gratifying activity that provides individuals with many years of creative recreational enjoyment. This article centers on the benefits of staying relaxed while on the dance floor. Being mindful of this makes dancing a most pleasant experience.

There are many reasons why people tense up while on the dance floor. Some just simply have a fear of dancing. This is known as 'chorophobia' which has its origins in the Greek language and literally means 'fear of dancing'. Maintaining a relaxed state requires a great deal of self-awareness, especially on the dance floor. Some individuals may become anxious in social dance environments while others are more naturally relaxed. The following are some underlying causes for dance floor uneasiness.

Newer dancers, for example, may lack confidence due to limited ballroom dance experience. They may easily become self-conscious and overly concerned that others are judging their dance abilities. This is actually a common overreaction as most dancers are usually not paying attention to or judging others' skills at a social dance. Another common cause of uneasiness is brought on by the perception that your partner is more experienced and therefore has expectations that exceeds your actual skill level. This can create a sense of uneasiness for both partners. In this circumstance your partner may be showing subtle signs of frustration throughout the dance. While this is never a good thing, it is likely to hinder one's ability to stay relaxed. There is something to be learned here about developing good partnering skills with each other.

Perhaps one of the biggest causes of uneasiness is brought about when one or both partners do not adequately understand their specific lead and follow roles. Both partners are responsible for knowing their essential role as leader and follower respectively. It is especially important for the leader to quickly assess their partner's skill level. For example, if the leader has more experience, he will need to accommodate the follower accordingly. The leader should never dance beyond the follower's capability in an attempt to show off or for any other reason. Instead, he should avoid overly complicated dance figures that his partner cannot follow. This would put the follower at a disadvantage, thereby making it more difficult for her to relax throughout the dance. This is all too common and creates unnecessary anxiety for both partners. Likewise, followers need to know how to properly respond to the leader's signals. Followers need to be careful not to push or pull against the lead. The lady has to resist the temptation of back-leading even if she thinks the leader is not guiding her correctly. She needs to allow the leader to lead her through the entire dance. These and other similar practices tend to generate unnecessary stress.

Dance floor anxiety is further exacerbated in crowded dance environments. Special attention always has to be given to collision avoidance with other dancers and objects. This requires a skill known as floor craft, which defines the ability to skillfully navigate around other dancers and objects as needed in order to avoid collision. Floor craft takes considerable experience especially on the part of the leader. The follower also has to have a level of confidence that the leader is proceeding safely. Implementation of a floor craft strategy is always easier when both partners are alert and relaxed. The combination of good floor craft skills and staying relaxed is an excellent way to foster a safer and more enjoyable dance experience. This is an ongoing process that becomes more naturally developed over time.

The following are some basic ways that dancers can condition themselves to relax more while on the dance floor. First and foremost is to be present in your own dance experience. Stay focused on what you are doing while allowing yourself to enjoy every aspect of the dance. Wear a big smile as you move through the dance. Breathe naturally, fully and rhythmically, as this will always make it easier to stay relaxed in any situation. Support each other's state of enjoyment. This approach is sure to bring the best out in each other.

When watching talented competition dancers, it is so vividly clear that these dancers simply love what they are doing. They convey a strong sense of relaxation and self-assurance. These dancers never appear erratic or fearful. Their expression of joy is front and foremost in each moment. This type of relaxed creative expression has always helped competition dancers win many awards as well as inspire their spectators.

The Dance Conversation

To You Who Are Standing Aside

By Sherry Jean Olander

What is it that keeps you from coming to the dances? What is it, that after you found a class, marked your calendar, and perhaps even shown up to the studio or ballroom, that makes you falter and not go after all? Perhaps you have taken a lesson or so, but leave soon after the class ends. Perhaps you watch for a while, toying with the idea of asking someone to dance or hoping that someone asks you, staying far away in a darker corner, not entirely sure you do want to get on the floor...do you know what it is that keeps you standing aside?

I've danced fairly consistently for over a decade, and I've seen beginners start with a bare grasp of rhythm eventually progress into confident dancers. Whatever age, whatever background, whatever skill or style you have – you have a right to find your place on the dancefloor.

Are you afraid? If so, I tell you that is okay. Fear is our friend and partner when something is new. Don't try to push it away! Turn toward it and see if you feel it somewhere in your body. See if you can ask it what it wants you to pay attention to or be careful of. Let it bring you the awareness to notice what you need and the energy to dare this new-to-you thing. (The same applies even if it's something you are returning to after many years away and what you fear is having lost something in that time). Fear has gifts for us if we can stay grounded, present in our bodies, continue to breathe, and listen...we can even learn to dance with it.

Are you waiting for permission? You don't need it but if you want it, take this as a declaration from me: You have my permission. What's more, you have the permission of the dancefloor. It exists before you, wooden and waiting; it will support you if you show up and simply begin. The dance floor holds the memories of every step anyone has taken on it. Mistakes, slips, and even falls – all of these are part of the stories it's seen, and it does not judge these things. It does not bar entry for those who are not perfect. The dance floor, too, has seen the moments of joy, of connection, of love, of pride and confidence, from all those who have stepped before. And that energy beckons you to add your part to its story.

Are you waiting to be "ready"? Well, my friend, this is something that may never fully happen. Usually this is just an excuse used by those of us plagued with perfectionism. It is important to listen to yourself and honor what's true for you, but make sure to ask yourself – what does ready look like? And after that – is this a reasonable expectation of myself? If you need a little time to get used to the idea, then take it, but don't let it take too long. Inertia can get in our way if we let it. Find a way to keep yourself from this trap. Set a deadline, plan a reward for yourself, bring a friend...there are many ways to help yourself cross the threshold. And it's perfectly okay to simply say to a perspective partner "I'm not sure if I'm ready, but I'd like to try." Humans can be scary, but most of us who dance are pretty cool and understanding people.

Whatever your reasons for standing aside, I want you to know – I see you. If I can, I will speak to you and ask you to dance. Whatever keeps you away, please question it. If you are waiting to dare to find a joy in dancing, please know that the dance, the floor, and the community are waiting for you too.

Michael Ditzkoff has taken ten years of private ballroom, latin, swing and hustle lessons; eight years of private Argentine Tango, Waltz and Milonga lessons; three years of Embodied Yoga to improve his frame, and six months of Alexander Technique to improve his posture. He was also a dance host on three cruise ships. Michael resumed playing the piano in July 2023, further sharpening his musicality.

One of the pleasures of summer is dancing Argentine Tango in Central Park at the Shakespeare Statue. (There's a free beginner's lesson for about 45 minutes beginning at 7:15. No partner required.) This takes place on Saturdays from June through September between 6 and 9:30 pm. For more information, go to www.newyorktango.com

Don't bring your dance shoes as the surface is like a sidewalk. Leaders should limit pivoting for the convenience of their partners. The music is all traditional, what I call "the good stuff."

Many times, I see a woman dancing by herself. But the way she dances differentiates her from other followers, even those dancing with a leader. She feels the music and I see intensity in every step. She steps purposely, feeling every beat of the music. She never rushes, taking long steps.

Why don't other followers move as well? I think part of the answer is poor instruction concentrating on steps, not movement. (November 2023 issue.) Knowing HOW to move is more important than which foot to move!! (January 2023 issue.) Each step requires a full commitment to a weight change. Also, rarely taught, this woman dances on the ball of her foot. Dancers who dance flat footed put their weight on the sole of the foot and drag it across the floor, creating a lot of friction and short steps. (August 2018 issue). If you can't move well, you can't dance well. (It's not negotiable.)

Even though the surface is terrible, she still glided across the pavement as if dancing on a smooth floor. Very few followers can do that, even on a smooth dance floor. Some dancers pick their feet off the ground because they can feel they aren't moving well. Correcting an error by creating another error isn't the right way to learn to dance well. I dance Apilado style to stay on the ball of the foot. (June 2018 issue.) Depending on the follower's frame, I sometimes change her dancing style to Apilado.

A good tango to practice intention is Pugliese's La Yumba. Walk to the music, sink into your hips, and take long steps. Take your time. Feel the music. Dance with Intention!!

After many years of living in Westchester County, I'm moving to Nassau County this month. I'm looking forward to dancing in venues that were too far away because of traffic. I may be able throw away my E-Z pass.

“Dancing in the Street” Returns to Oyster Bay for Another Summer of Fun!

Oyster Bay, NY—Get ready to groove! The Oyster Bay Main Street Association is thrilled to announce the return of “Dancing in the Street” for the 14th year; a beloved community event that brings music, movement, and smiles to the heart of historic downtown Oyster Bay.

Mark your calendars for five magical Friday nights this summer: July 18, July 25, August 1, August 8, and August 15. Each evening kicks off at 6:30 p.m. and wraps up at 9:30 p.m. Whether you’re a seasoned dancer or just looking for a fun way to spend a summer night, you’re invited to join the celebration.

The event takes place on Audrey Avenue around the Bandstand (74 Audrey Avenue for GPS), transforming the street into a lively dance floor. Feel free to bring a chair if you’d like to relax and enjoy the show from the sidelines.

Music for Everyone

Long Island’s own Louis Del Prete will be at the helm, spinning tunes from the 1940s to today’s hits. From Latin rhythms and ballroom classics to rock, pop, and line dances, Louis knows how to keep everyone on their feet. He’s not just a DJ—he’s a dancer, teacher, musician, and singer, known for creating an inviting atmosphere where everyone feels welcome.

A Community Celebration

The event is free and open to everyone. It’s the perfect way to unwind, connect with friends, and discover the vibrant local businesses in Oyster Bay. “Dancing in the Street” has become a special summer tradition in our town,” says Diane Meltzer, Promotion Chair for the Oyster Bay Main Street Association. “We’re excited to once again offer these evenings of fun, laughter, and togetherness under the stars.”

Supporting Local Life

While you’re downtown, take the opportunity to explore the local shops and eateries that make Oyster Bay so unique. From ice cream and coffee; to highly rated restaurants; to art galleries and boutiques, there’s plenty to enjoy before and after you dance.

Join Us!

We invite everyone—residents, visitors, friends, and families—to come out and join the fun. Bring your best moves or just bring your good vibes. Let’s make this summer one to remember!

For more information about “Dancing in the Street” and other community events, please visit www.oysterbaymainstreet.org.
